rubberneck wagon" on Broadway and Thirty-fifth street to-day, and forty 'rubbernecks" are now suffering from twisted backs and genuinely wry necks. The car lost a side full of windows, and the end of the coach was demolished. man at the megaphone, Raoul T. Laug-uraud, had told the forty sight-seers all its wonderful car system, its subways, its tall buildings, its artistic statues.

Just then something happened. A trolley car, guided by one of the old tenth of an inch between his fender and a transverse vehicle or jerk his passengers forty times a minute without an apology, ran laterally into the coach. The "rubberneck wagon" got the best of the deal, for when the shricking passengers both on the overspread coach and the car made up a list of the casualities the greater damage was done to the car. Nearly every window on one side was amasted. The peasengers, terrified by the sight of the impending juggeraut, thought they were to be ground in the mills of the gods. The "rubbernecks" stood stark still. New tork pasiated in all its giories became a very wicked city.

The driver of the wagon is R. Scheenmaker, of No. 1618 Third avenue. He, with his pariner, the magaphonist, say, that they gave the signal to the motorman to stop, but the latter refused in clearantly. Some of the people on the top of the wagon said: "Oh my, what language!"

The rubbernecks is not the coach. At that moment the Governor; "just a little chat about private things."

At that moment the door of the room opened again, and the voice of Mr. Morgan could be heard reading aloud certain extracts from the election laws.

Gov. Odell flushed up and hurried back to the room, shutting the door behind him.

"I was informed of that early to-day. The Governor of the State touching the button and the Metropolitan Superintendent on the proper of the wagon said: "Oh my, what language!"

Then it happened. The rubbernecks got the coach.

The driver of the wagon is R. Scheen maker, of No. 1618 Third avenue. He, with the proper of the Superintendent was prompt to respond. Thus we have the governor of the State touching the button and the Metropolitan Superintendent of the coach.
